

Medical studies - recognition of professional qualifications acquired

German French Spanish

Doctors from third countries, EU, EEA and Switzerland

The legal basis for practising medicine is the Federal Medical Order (BÄO). Anyone wishing to obtain a licence to practise medicine must have completed medical training, and also meet the personal requirements for this profession.

Applicants with medical training from an EU/EEA state

A licence to practise medicine is required for permanent practice. Please submit the documents according to the application by post.

Please note that the documents sent (including, for example, checking the application documents for completeness) can only be processed if the Stuttgart Regional Council is responsible for the case submitted.

To specify the local jurisdiction, please send suitable proof, for example the statement of a potential employer in Baden-Württemberg (hospital, clinic or doctor's practice) that there is an interest in your employment in the case of the licence to practise medicine. If personal circumstances are asserted (for example, close relatives in Baden-Württemberg), suitable documents must also be submitted from which this can be understood.

Please note that all applications for a licence to practise medicine which were previously processed in another federal state or if you are/were resident in another federal state must now include a definite job offer. The documents to be submitted must be accompanied by the promise of a position subject to the granting of the licence to practise medicine to the applicant.

Provisional and time-limited degree certificates issued by universities are not sufficient for the granting of the German licence to practise medicine.

According to the Federal Medical Order (Bundesärzteordnung, BÄO), the equivalence of the foreign medical studies with the current German medical studies is a prerequisite for the granting of the licence to practise medicine. The licence to practise medicine is to be granted - upon proof of the other prerequisites such as fully completed medical training, health suitability, absence of criminal convictions, sufficient German language skills - if proof is provided of equivalent studies

Please note

A review of the content of the documents sent (this includes, for example, the review of the application documents for completeness) can only take place if the local competence of the Regional Council of Stuttgart is given.

Please note that applicants who have previously applied for a licence to practise medicine in another federal state or who are/were resident in another federal state must prove by means of a concrete job offer (subject to the granting of the licence to practise medicine) that the medical profession will be practised in Baden-Württemberg after obtaining the licence to practise medicine.

Important note

As a rule, the diploma and the professional licence must be provided with a Hague Apostille or submitted legalised by the German Embassy in the country of training.

You can find information on this under

<https://www.auswaertiges-amt.de/de/service/konsularinfo/internationaler-urkundenverkehr>

The curriculum for the determination of equivalence via an expert opinion must be submitted in the original (usually with a German translation).

This original - like all other submitted documents - remains with the authority after the conclusion of the procedure.

All other documents to be submitted must be an officially certified copy (of the original).

An administrative fee is charged for application withdrawals.
